momscravings.com

Let's get straight to the point - you want to start a blog and don't need all of the mumbo jumbo - how about a simple step-by-step guide of how to get your blog up and running?? How does that sound?

This sounds sooo scary, but I can 100% promise you that it is not tough.

It is easy, but following my directions below will make life a wee-bit easier. Don't let the technical aspects of starting a blog scare you.

Jump in and get these steps checked off your list.

Get your hosting and URL in one step:

A cheap and easy host to start with is Bluehost.

It's a good starting place. Once you get to the point where your traffic is monumental you'll need to make a change, but for now: remember, we're just moving one foot in front of the other.

And, a bonus is the Bluehost.com installs WordPress for you, gives you a free domain name, and signing up is easier than signing up for Facebook. Plus their customer service is honestly the best in the business, especially as you're getting started. (In my opinion).

 If you decide to not start a blog online and want to cancel your hosting I want you to be aware of these things (it's just FYI, I know you're raring and ready to go!)

If you cancel within 30 days you receive a full refund on your hosting service only. The money-back guarantee does not apply to most add-on products, such as domains, given the unique nature of their costs.

If you cancel within 30 days and your plan includes a free domain, Bluehost will deduct a non-refundable domain fee of $15.99 from your refund. This not only covers our costs, but ensures that you won't lose your domain name. You may transfer it to another registrar or simply point it elsewhere at your convenience. Please note newly registered domains cannot be transferred to another registrar during the first 60 days of the registration period. You retain ownership of your domain until the end of its registration period unless you renew it.

Bluehost does not offer any refunds for cancellations that occur after 30 days.
